Ariadni Stogiannidou, Vice-Rector of Academic and Student Affairs, Professor of Psychology

Dear guests, dear colleagues,

Welcome to Aristotle University, the Psychology School and the city of Thessaloniki.

This evening, during the Ceremony inauguration, I will have the chance to present our University, mainly as to its academic mission and its effort towards excellence both in education and research.

It would be trivial to say that we are going through one of the worst crises both locally and internationally. I am certain that you will agree that increasing motivation and rearranging the contexts of learning should be an ultimate priority.

Dear colleagues, please, help us and help the world to achieve this goal!

I wish you all fruitful and pleasant work for these days to follow.

Thank you!
